Religious disputation is gradually going out of fashion, and it is well that it is so. Intelligent people do not longer relish sectarian controversy. First, it is endless, and, next, it is profitless. It creates bad blood between religious societies, and rarely convinces any body. We observe that at some points in the interior of West Virginia it is still the thing to carry on these profitless discussions. Grafton and Buckhannon have had their share of them. At this time, one of these controversies is on the tapis in Barbour county, between S. Corder and Elder George W. Bailey. One of the points of dispute is

"Did Christ redeem the whole world, that is the progeny of Adam, with the price of his precious blood, or did he re-deem his covenanted people only?"

One would suppose that by the year 1880 this point would have been settled one way or the other, for it has been debated hundreds of years, and by the ablest theologians of the Christian world. And yet it has to be gone over and over again by men who are perhaps the merest what we mean by smatterers in theology te a remark of Rev. Mr. Corder in we quote a remark of Rev. Mr. Corder in the last issue of the Barbour county Plaindcaler, showing his qualifications for such a discussion, as follows:

I desire to do nothing deleterious to the sweet influence of God's spirit, or act in a pusillanimous manner. With publind reason I have now been trying to preach the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ to the best of my ability for about forty years. I have coveted no man's silver or gold. I have preached the Gospel without charge. My own hands have ministered to my necessities. I would rather brown my hands in the field than to be a burden on my church, or make merchandise of the truth.

This record should certainly be very creditable to Mr. Corder, and, accepting it as true, he deserves, and no doubt receives, a large measure of public respect. But what does he mean by saying that with "purblind reason" he has been trying to preach the Gospel? That is a very enigmatical expression. A man who is mychilolic measurity ears stotsiolited.

enigmatical expression. A man who is purblind is generally very shortsighted, and "purblind reason" is a sort of contradiction in terms. If it means anything it means the person who is under its influence is very narrow and bigoted, and wholly unfit to preach the Gospel. We do not apply these inferences personally. do not apply these inferences personally, for we doubt not that Mr. Corder is an excellent man-perhaps very charitable-but, as showing how, in the slang phraseology of the day,-he gives himself away by the use of such words as a competent person to enlighten his fellow men on the great mysteries which he proposes to person to enlighten his fellow men on the great mysteries which he proposes to discuss.

Writers on logic tell us that a correct understanding and definition of terms is an indispensable prequisite to all forms of infelligent discussion, and this being true how can Mr. Corder expect to edify the world by anything new or profitable on such an abstruse topic as the scope of the Atonement when he confesses himself to be a victim of "purblind reason"—whatever that means.

The great necessity that is Izid nowadays upon people who, like Mr. Corder, feel called upon to expound theological mysteries, is to recognize that the time has gone past for endless and vexatious disputes on subjects which they do disputes on subjects which they do not, more than other people, understand, and address themselves to the simplicity of all that makes for the good of mankind. This is an age of doubt and unrest, and the public mind needs not to be torn up by metaphysical hair splitting over involvby metaphysical nair spinting over involved and far-fetched points that are incapable of settlement, but rather to be set at rest as far as possible by the plain and simple presentation of truth in its most striking forms.

That the discoveries are wonderful and valuable is certain. They will start up all the archeologist and give new impetus to fraternity writers. Anything that concerns cryptology is interesting to me, but I have not yet been able to discover any connection between Egyptian cryptology and the modern crait. I became a Mason at the age of twenty-one, have reached the thirty-third degree and have been Grand Master of the State. I have made Masonic history a study, but have never been able to trace Masony more than four hundred years back—not a step beyond the Crusades. As near as I can judge, it had its origin on the continent of Europe, with the builders of the great European cathedrals, and was organized for the protection of the women from the bosses' and the feudal leaders. It was purely operative Masonry then, and it naturally adopted the tools of the craft as emblematic of their, trade union, and grips and pass words which were also intended to guard from intrusion. Everything in that day partook of the religious element, and consequently religion entered largely into the organization of the guild. The failure of the southern people to become enthusiastic and demonstrative upon the appearance of General Grant among them has turned public attention good deal to the rather unexpected ad vancement of Mr. Washburne in popular favor as an eligible candidate for the Pres idency. The Camerons and Conking are big men in a Convention, and we hope and believe they will be able to override in Convention the views of the anti-third term men, and thereby give Samuei J. Discoveries Under the Pedestal of Cleepatra's Needle.

Great interest has been excited in Masonic circles by reports from Egypt that Masonic emblems have been found under the pedestal of Cleopatra's Needle, which is to be brought to this city. A despatch from Lieutenant Commander Gorringe of the United States Navy to the New York World says:

"Immediately under the pedestal of the obelisk and in the cast angle formed by the steps I found a block of hewn syenite granite, forty inches in the cube, representing a perfect Masonic altar. Under this and immediately below I found a wide proper in the constitution of 1876.

Having a leisure hour, I deter mined to examine the contents of this mined to examine the contents of that case invest, and I was surprised to see the delicate perfection to which they have brought their household remedies, I was chagrined at the reflection that, while we have at home the most skillful and pre-eminently the bost physicians in the world, these Yankee dectors distance the world, these Yankee doctors distance us so far in the line of popular medicines for family use. They have the sharpness to take advantage of the high scientific discoveries among us, and make pills and potions as palatable as they are salutary. I was told by a leading druggist in Philadelphia that Dr. Ayer's manufactory was the largest in America, giving employment to hundreds.
